jazmaonline.boards.net/thread/3222/pauls-books

I am retired from the California Department of Fish and Wildlife and enjoy spending time with family and my two dogs Champagne and Ire. I am pretty much retired as a paranormal investigator too. Sure, I will investigate a haunted home if it's local. I will also help people over the phone. I will explain to the client on how to self-bless their home and if they have a demonic attachment, recommend a full submersion baptism, which is a basic form of exorcism. At one time when HPI (Halo Paranormal Investigations) was at its prime, we had 50 active paranormal investigators. If I had an investigation, I would go over the bios of my investigators and would determine what investigators were needed for an investigation. It was sort of like how Jim Phelps of Mission Impossible TV show would go over the bios and pictures of his agents and determine what agents were needed for a mission.

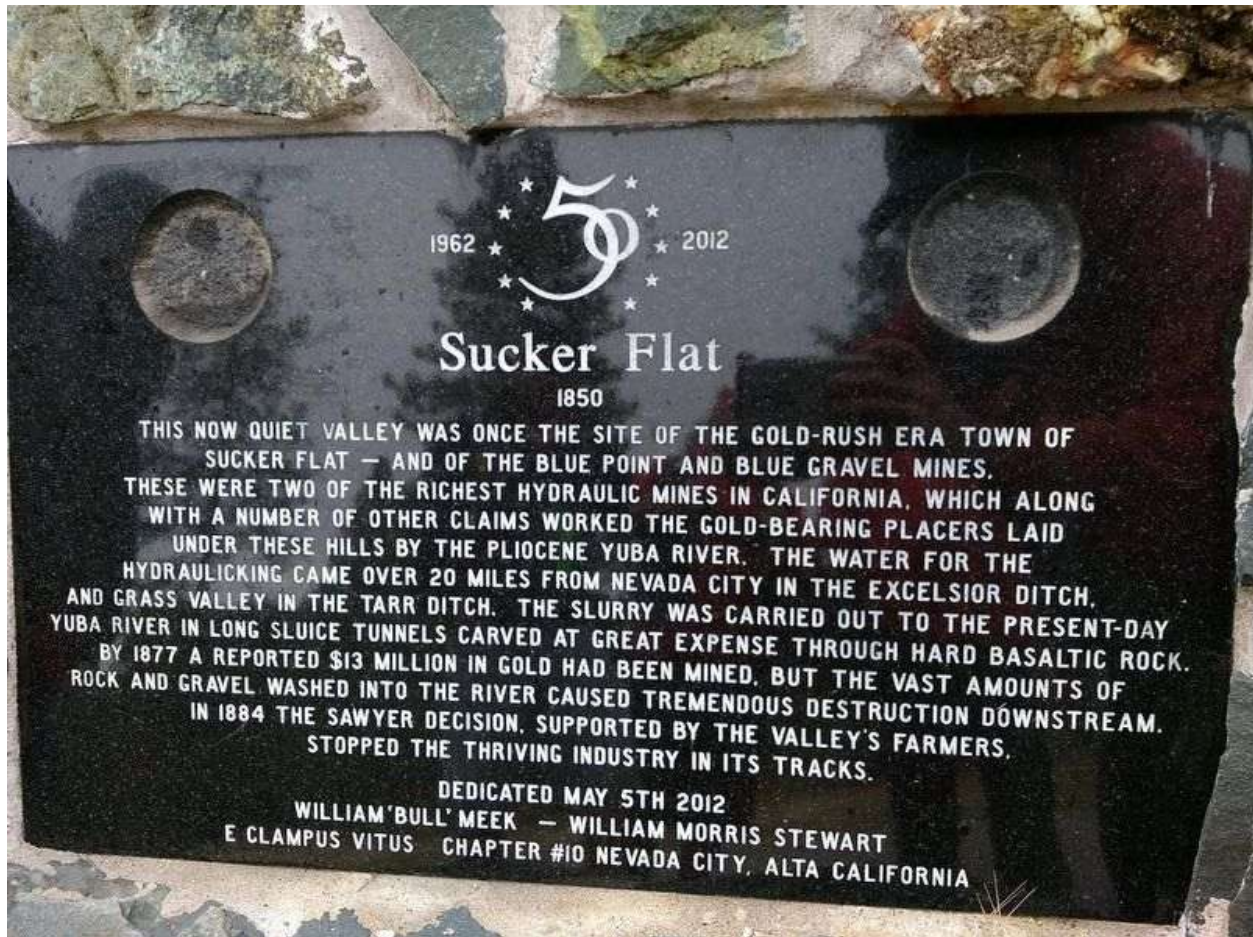

I discovered that many ghost hunting groups will go out and investigate a client's home and would not do any type of cleansing to help that client out. Some groups even would suggest to the client that they should probably move. My group did the opposite. We did everything in our power to help that client. HPI (Halo Paranormal Investigations) had many investigators that specialized in various types of cleansings. Whatever religion the client was, we respected that religion. I perform a Roman Catholic house blessing and perform full submersion baptisms. If a client was a Buddhist, then I would have a Buddhist investigator do the cleansing the Buddhist way. I also had investigators that would be able to conduct cleansings and blessings for religions such as: Wiccan; Miwok Native American; Greek Orthodox; Baptist; Christian; Hindu; Sikhism; Jainism; Taoism; Islam and Protestantism. We even had a Federal Agent on the team that knew how to do a Voodoo cleansing, because her mother was a Voodoo high priestess from Haiti. We were actually able to utilize her abilities on two cases that involved a "voodoo curse". I would say when HPI was active, we had a 95% success rate with our cleansings. The 5% non-successful cases were due to the fact, that the client went back to doing harmful things like playing with a Ouija Board once again.

At our HPI International group on Facebook, I had subscribers from all over the United States and some places overseas. If I received a call on the paranormal hotline from out-of-state or international, I usually could find an investigator on my HPI International (group) to help out on the investigation. I would also be briefed in regard to the outcome. At times I would provide information on how to conduct a Roman Catholic house blessing to the investigators and the clients. The HPI International group on Facebook still exists. HPI International on Facebook was definitely a Plan B. My advice to ghost hunting groups: "Always have a contingency plan!"

Ghosts at the Mines: Sucker Flat

Paul Dale Roberts, HPI's Esoteric Detective
Halo Paranormal Investigations

After my investigation of the very haunted town of Smartsville, I received an email from a Yuba County local named Dennis Beam. Dennis asked me to come back, because near the town of Smartsville is a former mining area called Sucker Flat. Sucker Flat like Smartsville is very haunted. From all of the mining that was done at Sucker Flat, there were many industrial accidents that lead to severe injuries and at times death. In the present day, there is no mining at Sucker Flat, but people still hear blasting noises late at night. Locals hear disembodied voices and at times screams and yelling. Nevada City Detrik K says he heard what sounded like a rockslide. Detrik looked around and saw no rockslide.

Sucker Flat is one of the first places where hydraulic mining was used during the California Gold Rush. The first large-scale primitive hydraulic mining in the area began at the Blue Point Mine in Sucker Flat, according to the Online Archive of California. Specifically, Sucker Flat is situated near the town of Smartsville in Yuba County. The area is significant for its role in the early development of hydraulic mining techniques during the Gold Rush. The historical marker for Sucker Flat is located on Natoma Way in Smartsville.

I went back to Smartsville and checked out Sucker Flat. One of my paranormal investigators Loki Blackwood captured an EVP of a man yelling. The EVP said: "Move out the way!!" Sucker Flat was a town and mining area in California that played a significant role in the state's Gold Rush history. It is rumored that this was a stomping ground for the gentleman outlaw Charles E. Boles. You might know him as Black Bart. Sucker Flat was a Gold Rush era town and the site of the Blue Point and Blue Gravel Mines, which were among the richest hydraulic mines in California. Stories are told that some miners would steal from other miners, leading to a gunfight where one miner would pay the ultimate price, which is death.

Severe injuries occurred during the hydraulic mining. This type of mining used a technique that involved using high-pressure water cannons to wash away gravel and expose gold deposits. Primitive hydraulic mining methods were first used in Sucker Flat, but they later transitioned to more advanced techniques as technology improved. By 1877, the mines at Sucker Flat had reportedly produced $13 million in gold. With this much gold, there were desperados consumed by greed and would not hesitate in becoming a cutthroat thief. One of my investigators named Tara claimed that she saw a ghostly miner running through the grass. She did not capture this apparition on film. Loki said he felt the ground shake.

Sucker Flat did have some environmental issues. Hydraulic mining caused significant environmental destruction downstream by washing large amounts of rock and gravel into the river, disrupting farmland and damaging aquatic habitats. Sucker Flat came to an end with the Sawyer Decision. In 1884, the Sawyer Decision, influenced by concerns from downstream farmers, effectively banned hydraulic mining, bringing an end to the thriving industry in Sucker Flat. Today, the town of Sucker Flat has largely vanished, but the area's history remains marked by its past as a major hydraulic mining site. The ghosts of this former mining town will be here forever. The residual energy will replay itself over and over again. Ghosts that never moved on will continue to haunt Sucker Flat. Perhaps a miner who died suddenly in a terrible accident and now as a ghost, he is trying to figure out how he died and why he died. Some ghosts seem like they don't realize that they are dead and will ask the question: "Am I dead?" My last EVP before leaving this old mining town is "who dead?" It would seem the ghost is confused and is asking who is dead.

Additional Information:

A collection of stereographs from the Sucker Flat Mine, depicting images of the mining operations and the town in the early 1870s, is available for research.

The area has seen reclamation efforts and is now part of a system of protected lands with wetlands and natural habitats.

Visitors can hike a historic trail, the Miner's Ditch, which once provided water for the region's first hydraulic mine at Rose Bar. It has been reported that people sometimes hear disembodied heavy breathing and disembodied footsteps.

Haunted Historic City Hall: Rocklin, CA

By Paul Dale Roberts, HPI's Esoteric Detective
Halo Paranormal Investigations

I received this message from Rocklin, CA native Adam Wilson:

"Hello, So I work as a custodian in Rocklin CA and I was just in Historic City Hall and had a really weird experience so I got out asap and looked into the history of the building and came across an article you wrote (can't find it again) about coming out here and people reporting ghosts, it said you came to this location but didn't say if you picked up on anything here. I was wondering if you did?

Adam, here is my report about the Historic City Hall in Rocklin, CA.

Historic City Hall (3980 Rocklin Road) was the City of Rocklin's first center of city business and municipal meetings. Adolf Pernu, owner of Rocklin's early 20th Century California Granite Company, built the City Hall in 1912 as a company store for his employees. The 1912 date is inscribed in a granite frontispiece over the front entrance. Pernu died in a quarry accident in Sequoia National Park in 1931, and as Rocklin's quarry businesses faltered with the Great Depression, Pernu's creditors took possession of the building. While investigating on the outside perimeters of this city hall, my psychic medium Wish Fire picked up on an entity at the doorway. With my digital recorder, I asked the entity who he was. The EVP that I captured was the name "Adolf". Wish Fire said the entity was wearing a casual brown suit and what appeared to be a cotton brown tie. The entity walked thru the door and vanished.

The City of Rocklin bought this building from a successor owner in 1941, and it has been Rocklin's City Hall since then. Rocklin's old timers remember that Rocklin's library occupied the first floor in the early 1940s with City Council meetings were on the second floor. Businessman Chung Moon arrived in California in 1912 from Hawaii and operated a market in the building from some time before 1930 until the late 1930s. His family occupied the second floor until they purchased the home of Dr. Henry Fletcher across the street. Today, the Fletcher home is the site of the Rocklin History Museum. Wish Fire picked up on a multitude of voices and believes that this is the residual voices of customers talking about the items being sold in the market. Wish Fire said it sounded like "haggling".

Hi,

I just wanted to share my experience and curious if you had any insight. Back in 2020 I was staying at a ranch on a mountain in Fiddletown, CA. During a night hike ascending up the mountain I noticed about 15 floating translucent black "shadows" all similar in size and slightly unique in shape. It was dark but visible by the moon. Like floating black mist . All at different depths within the forest (in one area about 100 ft or so). One was very close. It did not feel threatening but present. I asked my friend if she saw something looking out in that direction and she said if you mean the dark figures (not human shaped, more up and down rectangular and wide) then yes. We turned around and left. As we left she tripped and fell but I am not sure if it related I would have to connect with her to confirm. What could this have been?

Four Mystical Places

Solomon Islands:

The Solomon Islands are often said to be haunted, with numerous stories and legends about supernatural occurrences and ghostly encounters. These stories are prevalent throughout the Pacific Islands and are often passed down through generations via oral storytelling. There are stories of "war ghosts". Many stories center around the ghosts of World War II, particularly from battles fought on islands like Guadalcanal. Sailors have made claim that they have seen phantom battles on some of the islands.

The Solomon Islands even has its own cryptid. That cryptid is known as the Kakamora. The Kakamora are a legendary, short-statured people of the Solomon Islands. Somewhat like the Menhune of Hawaii. Legend has it that the Kakamora in ancient times was an extraterrestrial scouting party that got stranded on Solomon Islands. Some of the Kakamora left the islands and became the Menhune that are said to live on the islands of Hawaii. The Kakamora are very elusive and hide in the dense jungles of the Solomon Islands. There are stories of sorcery being performed at the islands, and reports of terrifying, shape-changing ancestral spirits.

A mythical island called Teonimenu once existed and then one day it just vanished. There is scientific evidence suggesting that an island did indeed disappear suddenly. Teonimenu is similar to Hy-Brasil. Hy-Brasil vanished off the coast of Ireland. It's a phantom island featured in Irish folklore and was often depicted on maps as a separate landmass west of Ireland. Legends described it as a land of paradise or a realm of the gods, visible only for a single day every seven years. Some ancient alien theorists believe that Teonimenu and Hy-Brasil may have been aerial spaceships that were parked in the ocean. The people of Ireland and the people of Solomon Islands thought these 2 land masses were islands, when in fact they were extraterrestrial spaceships that flew off and returned to the heavens. As for ghosts at the Solomon Islands, you will find plenty. Ghosts are believed to roam freely in various locations, including high isles and low reef atolls.

Milford Sound, New Zealand

The area does have a rich history and folklore that includes a legend about a hero named Maui and a mourning bird, the piopio. This legend, combined with the dramatic and sometimes eerie scenery, can contribute to a sense of mystery and intrigue, leading some to perceive the area as having a "haunting" quality. A Reddit user stated: "Milford Sound as the darkest place the poster has ever been, and that the darkness "defies everything". Vacationers, hikers, fishermen, campers have reported eerie sites of shadowy transparent people walking around bushes and trees and then vanishing. There have been many deaths at Milford Sound. Most recently a hiker died in 2022 and another hiker, hiking around Mitre Peak died on the trails in 2025. A Kayaker died in 2024. There has been other water related deaths. Campers have encountered "The Blue Ladies". Three ghostly women dressed in blue dresses crossing hiking trails. Legend has it, if you come across The Blue Ladies, you may have an accident that will cause an injury.

Lake Tahoe

Lake Tahoe's depths hold a variety of features, including historic shipwrecks, a potential ancient forest, and a variety of aquatic life. There are also legends about creatures like "Tahoe Tessie" and the preservation of bodies due to the cold water. When I lived in Lake Tahoe, I was told by one of the managers of Harrah's Tahoe that many gaming tokens aka poker casino chips that were no longer in use were dumped in Lake Tahoe. Some of those chips were placed in containers that looked treasure chests. The Emerald Bay Maritime Heritage Trail includes sunken barges and other boats resting on the lakebed. It is rumored that World War II planes sit on the bottom of the lake. When I worked at Harrah's Tahoe and later with Sahara Tahoe Casino, I heard many ghost stories. Besides the cryptid named Tessie, we have hauntings at the Thunderbird Lodge. The lodge, built by the wealthy recluse George Whittell Jr., is said to be haunted by him and his mistress, Mae Mollhagen.

At the Cal Neva Lodge which was a former celebrity retreat is rumored to be haunted by Frank Sinatra, Marilyn Monroe, and other members of the Rat Pack. A "floor man" at Harrah's Tahoe Casino claimed he saw the ghost of Frank Sinatra at Cal Neva Lodge. The ghost of a murdered showgirl is said to haunt the Tahoe Biltmore. Sometimes she is seen crying. A man in black suit, white shirt and black tie is seen walking around the Watson Cabin Museum. Many believe this is the former ghostly owner hanging around. The Watson Cabin Museum is the oldest wooden building in Lake Tahoe. What is really scary is the Tahoe City Public Beach. A jilted bride is said to haunt this beach, attempting to lure young men to their deaths. As a paranormal investigator I investigated many haunted locations at Lake Tahoe, including the Donner Party site. There were reports of people seeing a caravan in the woods and then vanishing. They believe it was the Donner Party caravan. I have been to Heritage Plaza to hunt the lake monster named Tessie. I spent the whole day there and only saw a floating log that a couple of people thought may have been Tessie. Unfortunately, it wasn't. There are stories of the Mafia dumping bodies into the deep waters of Lake Tahoe, particularly off the South Shore. Oh, we have one more cryptid at Lake Tahoe. The Washoe people have their own legends of a creature called the Ong, which they believed inhabited the lake. The Ong, as it became known, was said to have wings as long as the tallest pine tree, colossal-webbed feet, and was covered in both feathers and scales. Legend maintains that the creature also had a human-like face.

When you leave Lake Tahoe, you are safe...well, maybe. The Sierra Nevada Mountains have stories of werewolves, UFOs and Bigfoot. So, I guess, you aren't safe until you reach home.

Garlock, CA (Ghost Town)

Like many other abandoned mining towns, Garlock's decaying buildings and desolate setting naturally evoke a sense of mystery and a taste of the past. Many people interpret this as ghostly. The town's history, marked by failed attempts to strike it rich and the eventual abandonment of the area, includes stories of untimely deaths and hardship, which has thrown coal into the furnace in believing this town is haunted. Dora Weredon of Bakersfield, CA claims she saw 3 ghostly miners manifest under a blazing desert sun. Dora at first thought they were mannequins portraying miners and started to walk towards them. The miners then vanished. Some visitors have heard disembodied moaning, coughing and hacking. High Desert Paranormal out of Los Angeles captured 2 EVPs. First EVP: "Get the Nipper!" (male voice). 2nd EVP: "Three muckmen!" (male voice). When I visited Garlock, all I captured were orbs. Orbs can be almost anything and the orbs I caught, I believe were merely dust orbs. I captured no EVPs. When walking around Garlock, I felt vertigo. I have no explanation for that. I was not dehydrated. I just don't know.

SPECIAL NOTE:

I have been to Auckland, New Zealand with Patricia Mary Mitchell & my stepson Jason Randall Porter and heard many stories about Milford Sound. We wanted to head over there, but didn't have time. When I lived in Lake Tahoe, I was a professional dancer with Jeff Kutache's Dancing Machine and we were the first number to Cher. We performed at Harrah's Tahoe. My uncle Jose Causing, Merchant Marine has been to Solomon Islands and says that these islands are very haunted. Many villages are said to be haunted by past relatives of the villagers.

Mali has Ancient Aliens & Restless Spirits

Paul Dale Roberts, HPI's Esoteric Detective

A Visit from Ancient Aliens

The Dogon tribe, a West African people, from Mali have a rich mythology that includes detailed knowledge of the Sirius star system, including its white dwarf companion, Sirius B, which is invisible to the naked eye. Some researchers believe this knowledge was imparted by ancient alien visitors, specifically the amphibious Nommos, from the Sirius system. The Dogon tribe has extraordinary astronomical knowledge. This knowledge couldn't have come from another tribe. It had to come from an advanced intellectual race of beings. I believe those beings were extraterrestrial. Sirius B can only be seen by advanced telescopes. How did the Dogon tribe know about Sirius B's 50-year elliptical orbit around Sirius A? Again, this points at an advanced race of beings parting knowledge to this primitive tribe. The Dogon tribe also knew about Jupiter's moons and Saturn's rings, which are ONLY visible with telescopes. The Dogon tribe has no telescopes.

I do believe that the Nommos visited the Dogon tribe in the ancient past and gave the Dogon tribe astronomical knowledge. There is no other logical answer. Now let's look at the restless spirits that haunt many places in Mali.

Timbuktu

Timbuktu has many historic mosques and is the keeper of ancient manuscripts. Timbuktu is known to be very haunted. Tourists visiting the old city have reported seeing apparitions of scholars and traders from centuries past wandering the dusty streets at night. The ghostly apparitions do not notice their observers and continue walking to an unknown destination. Some locals and tourists have made claim to hearing faint whispers in the deserted alleys believed to be the voices of those who contributed to Timbuktu's golden age but met untimely ends due to conflicts or diseases. The city's spectral presence serves as a haunting reminder of its past history and the many people that lived in Timbuktu.

Djenne Mosque

The Great Mosque of Djenne is an architectural marvel. Legend has it that powerful spirits protect the mosque. They appear as shadowy figures in the early morning mist. These guardians are said to roam the mosque grounds ensuring that the structure remains intact. Visitors have reported feeling an unnerving presence when exploring the mosque alone, with some even witnessing mysterious lights flickering in the minarets at night. One tourist saw an apparition down one hallway, the apparition approached him and then walked through him. When this happened, the tourist felt a sudden cold chill throughout his whole body.

Gao's Ancient Tombs

Gao once a prosperous capital of the Songhai Empire is dotted with ancient tombs and crypts. These burial sites are reputed to be haunted by the spirits of royals and warriors who once ruled the land. Locals tell tales of ghostly figures in traditional attire appearing around the tombs at dusk. Some adventurers have recounted eerie encounters such as sudden drops in temperature and unexplained whispers echoing through the burial chambers adding to the mystique of this ancient city.

Bandiagara Escarpment / Mali Subaga

The Bandiagara Escarpment is a stunning geological formation that is also steeped in supernatural stories. The Dogon people known for their rich traditions and cosmology believe that ancestral spirits inhabit certain parts of the cliffs. Visitors have reported seeing ghostly figures on the rocks and hearing drumming sounds without any visible source. Some say that these are the spirits of ancient Dogon priests performing rituals long after their physical bodies have perished. Many animal spirits have been seen in this area. There have been reports of ghostly hyenas, vanishing monkeys and spectral slithering snakes. In Bambara mythology, evil spirits also exist in various forms. For example, some traditions mention bush devils as nightmarish versions of apes. Additionally, in the mythology of the Igbo people of Nigeria, who have cultural ties to some Malian ethnic groups, there are Ogbanje, evil spirits disguised as children who cause misfortune and grief. During dusk, you may encounter a nightmarish female sorcerer called the Mali Subaga. If you see the Mali Subaga, you will face misfortune. Mali Subaga is believed to be an evil spirit that lives at the Bandiagara Escarpment.

Koulikoro's Battlefield Sites

Koulikoro's numerous historical battlefield sites are believed to be haunted by the spirits of warriors who perished in battle. Locals recount seeing ghosts clad in traditional armor roaming these fields. These apparitions are often seen reenacting battles as if forever bound to the land by the violence of their past. Visitors have reported feeling an overwhelming sense of sorrow and hearing the faint clash of weapons when exploring these areas, a haunting reminder of the region's turbulent history. The fields are overshadowed with strong negative residual energy.

Comments: This book is charged with exciting information about Bigfoot! We have two spectacular authors who place their thoughts to paper and discuss the mysterious cryptid known as Bigfoot! Jim Willis & Michael A. Kozlowski. RIP to a great man: Jim Willis. Jim's last wish was for this book to be completed and published. It fell on the shoulders of Michael A. Kozlowski. Michael did a fantastic job in getting this diamond polished and published for the masses! Jim talks about his own personal experience with Bigfoot. He talks about "tree-knocking". Jim says this is common for Bigfoot Hunters and it's a type of communication, a warning. A way of saying: "I'm coming through, keep your distance." As an Esoteric Detective, I utilized "tree-knocking" many times during my Bigfoot hunts. I had a successful "tree-knocking" experience in Mount Shasta. I took a piece of wood and smacked it 3 times against the tree. The knocking echoed through the forest. On my 3rd time, I received results. I hit the tree 3 times and right behind me, 3 rocks were thrown into the creek. There were no humans behind me and a bear definitely could not throw 3 rocks into the creek. I believe in my heart, I had a successful communication encounter with Bigfoot. Jim brought back a great memory.

This book covers a lot in regard to those giant hairy beasts we know as Bigfoot. In this book, you will learn how Bigfoot got its name. How people started calling the Abominable Snowman "Yeti". Big hairy creatures are seen all around the world, but it appears that America is Ground Zero for sightings. You will learn about John Walter Burns (1888 - 1962) who became an Indian Agent and a Native American school teacher. Burn's gained the trust of the Chehalis people and they tell him the stories of the hairy giants that inhabited the land from time immemorial. As I mentioned before, these hairy humanoids are seen all over the world. For example, in China, they're called Yeren. The aboriginal people of Australia call them Joogabinna. The Almas stalk the mountainous regions of Mongolia and Central Asia. As you can see, I kid you not they are everywhere. If you ever questioned if Bigfoot is extraterrestrial or interdimensional, all of the theories are laid out in this book. You will find out that UFOs are somehow connected to Bigfoot. I am retired from California Fish and Game and many hunters that I talked with, have seen Bigfoot in the Sierra Nevada Mountains. Some of the hunters I talked with even said that they would see a UFO first, then see a Bigfoot, or the other way around. There seems to be some type of connection, and those connections are pursued and explored in this book. Could Bigfoot be the extinct Gigantopithecus? Find out here in this book, the theory is definitely discussed. A photo I found fascinating is a Bigfoot nest display at the Kirov Region, Russia. A very nice exhibit. Also, in this book are stories about Bigfoot hunters like Todd Standing. Todd claims he has seen Bigfoot many times and has taken people out to see Bigfoot. Todd claims he knows where Bigfoot hangs out at. Todd has an 80 percent success rate in taking people out to see Bigfoot or have some kind of interaction. Some people think Todd is a fraud or the ultimate hoaxter. Then some people stand by him. You will get information on Australia's Yowie, which is similar to Bigfoot. This book brought back many memories of my past Bigfoot hunts. I remember talking with one hunter that claims he shot at Bigfoot, and it exploded into a zillion sparks. If this is true, that would mean that Bigfoot is an energy creature and probably goes from its own reality to our reality and that is probably why we can't find a dead corpse of a Bigfoot. This book was so much fun to read, it brought back so many memories of my past Bigfoot hunts. If you are curious about Bigfoot and want to go on a Bigfoot hunt, I highly suggest you read this book first! I thought I knew everything about Bigfoot, until I picked up this book!

Schönlaterngasse:

This street is home to the "Basilisk House" (Basiliskhaus), named after the mythical serpent-like creature said to have terrorized the area. The legend involves a well where the basilisk was supposedly killed, and the house was built to commemorate the event. J.K. Rowling was aware of this legend and the Basiliskhaus Serpent became part of the Harry Potter Universe. The Basilisk in the Harry Potter Universe is a giant, venomous serpent that plays a significant role in the Harry Potter series, specifically in the second book/movie, Harry Potter and the Chamber of Secrets. It is a creature of immense power, capable of killing with its gaze or venomous bite. Did this creature ever exist? The people of Schönlaterngasse Street believe in the legend. A local named Bettina Schmidt believes that the serpent once had an owner in Vienna and when the serpent became too large, the owner released it on the street. Bettina's grandmother believed it to be an escaped python. She believed it was either a Reticulated Python or a Green Anaconda. Bettina says that all legends have a foundation of truth. I met Bettina on a cruise line at Lake Constance, and she related this story to me.

Vienna Woods (Wienerwald):

The extensive forests surrounding Vienna are a source of many local legends. These include stories of werewolves, ghostly figures, and other supernatural beings said to roam the woods at night. The White Lady, a famous ghost in Vienna is known to appear all over Vienna, especially is seen in the Vienna Woods. The White Lady is dressed in a flowing white dress, and she looks like she is looking for something. Jakob Mayr, a hiker came across The White Lady crossing his path. When she entered the woods on the other side of the trail, Jakob could no longer see her. Mayerling is located in the Vienna Woods, Mayerling is a site with a tragic history that has attracted visitors and those interested in its past. Here is what happened. At the Mayerling hunting lodge in January 1889, Crown Prince Rudolf of Austria and his lover Baroness Mary Vetsera died in a suspected murder-suicide pact. While the official report claimed Rudolf died of heart failure, the discovery of both their bodies, with Rudolf having a gunshot wound and Mary with a bullet wound to the temple, pointed to a different scenario. The incident remains shrouded in mystery and is often referred to as the "Mayerling Incident". Some tourists and locals who have visited the site claim that they hear sobbing and what sounds like crying. They believe the sobbing and crying is from the ghost of Baroness Mary Vetsera.

St. Stephen's Cathedral (Stephansdom):

This iconic cathedral has its share of spooky tales, including stories of a ghostly knight and other spectral figures said to inhabit the area. One prominent element that fuels these stories is the catacombs beneath the cathedral. Built over centuries, these crypts house the remains of thousands of people, including Duke Rudolph IV and Viennese cardinals and archbishops. The sheer volume of human remains, particularly those removed from city cemeteries during the bubonic plague outbreaks, creates a somber and eerie atmosphere. It is understandable that some visitors have reported feeling chills or a sense of unease, leading to stories of "presences of a spirit nature" in the catacombs. Tobias Hofer a former caretaker felt ghostly fingers run down the back of his neck to his spine. Once as he was combing his hair, he felt the ghostly fingers massaging the top of his head. Tobias feels the ghost is harmless, but sometimes Tobias gets spooked from the experience. A local named Birgit Fuchs has seen the ghostly knight standing guard outside of the Cathedral. When Birgit approached the knight, thinking it was an actor, the knight vanished.

Hofburg Palace:

Empress Elisabeth aka Sisi was known for her interest in the supernatural. She still roams the palace halls. Many tourists have seen her apparition at the palace. The ghost of Sisi does not interact with any of the tourists. Another ghost that haunts the palace is a ghost called "The Accused Guard". The Accused Guard when he was living was accused of raping a local. His ghost is now seen on the palace grounds and inside the castle. Tourists say that his face is full of anger.

St. Rupert's Church (Ruprechtskirche):

As the oldest church in Vienna, St. Rupert's has accumulated its share of legends and tales of ghostly encounters over the centuries. The most popular is that locals and tourists have seen ghostly images of people praying. People have also heard disembodied chanting and singing coming out of the church.

Ankeruhr Clock:

This clock tower features figures that move to represent historical figures, and some stories suggest that these figures might have a ghostly presence after dark, otherwise the clock does not have any paranormal activity surrounding the clock. There was one incident that pertained to the clock. In July of 1974, during dusk a werewolf type of creature was seen next to the clock. When a few people started getting excited and pointing towards the werewolf-looking creature, the creature ran off, never to be seen again. Referred to as the Ankeruhr Clock Werewolf.

JASON GHOST HUNTS IN ORLANDO, FLORIDA

My son Jason Porter and my granddaughters flew out to Orlando, Florida. They are having a great time at Disneyworld and Universal Studios. They will also do some ghost hunting and have a list of places they want to check out. Of course, they will be limited on time, so some of the places on the list, they will probably not get to. Here are the places on their list:

Orlando, Florida, boasts several locations with reported paranormal activity. These include the Orange County Regional History Center, Greenwood Cemetery, and Hamburger Mary's, among others. The Kress Building, the old train depot, and the Angebilt Hotel are also mentioned as having ghostly residents. Specifically, here are some of the most frequently cited haunted places in Orlando:
